

Zenon Kelly

Zenon Kelly is the Director of Operations for the Jewish War Veterans (JWV) and the National Museum of American Jewish Military History (NMAJMH), a role he embraced in July 2024. Zenon grew up in the suburbs of Pittsburgh, PA, as one of six boys, where he developed a strong sense of teamwork and loyalty. After an impactful 23-year career with the United States Army, culminating as the First Sergeant for the Orlando Medical Recruiting Company, Zenon transitioned to his current position with JWV. His academic background includes a Bachelor's Degree in Administration of Justice from American Military University/APUS and an MBA from Grantham University, both of which have further honed his leadership skills.

Now living in Stafford, Virginia, with his wife, Aliscia, they have three sons—Tyler (28), Alec (20), and Austin (17)— In his spare time, he enjoys family activities, volunteering, riding motorcycles, and passionately supporting the Pittsburgh Steelers. In his role as Director of Operations, Zenon oversees the National Headquarters staff, manages building maintenance, accounting, development, and the editing of The Jewish Veteran. He also handles various administrative tasks, including insurance policies and veteran service issues. Zenon works closely with NED Ken Greenberg to align JWV's goals with daily operations and keeps leadership informed about staff activities. He is also the main contact for planned giving inquiries and can be reached at zkelly@jwv.org or at extension 408.
